Yeah, I'm SO glad that you're still around! I've been waiting to get that correction! ☺ Hopefully David or someone has it, and they can get it to me tonight. I'll be happy to hang out as long as needed tonight.

Thanks!

Thanks, Joan and Melissa!

And do we still need to change part (or all) of the first sentence of this paragraph on the home page? I heard that we did, but I don't have the updated language:

While excavating loose material that had collapsed into the cave entry, pressurized water began leaking above the mine tunnel, spilling about three million gallons of water stored behind the collapsed material into Cement Creek, a tributary of the Animas River.

Is that accurate? I've not seen that before.
